

The Great Final Round Up To Be or Not To Be

Is the forceful argument of the "Fortune Teller." The word NOT TO BE as applied here never entered the vocabulary of the founder of this store. We CAN and will BE has been the slogan since the store was. To this end a foundation strong as Gibraltar was laid upon the rim rock of principle. In building the roof the cellar was not neglected. In every section the self same iron clad policies of fair dealing have been and will be carried out as long as this store is.

COTTERAL'S SHIP CAPTAIN DECISION WASTES PITIFUL BOOMERANG STORY OF WRECK

EXPRESS COMPANIES AT O. C. RETURN BOOZE AS RESULT OF INJUNCTION

Oklahoma City, Aug. 17.—Police Chief Nichols was jubilant Monday at the first sample of the working of the "federal injunction boomerang," as the recent decision of Judge Cotteral at Enid in regard to seizure of booze shipments is considered. After attempted delivery, thirty-four gallons of whiskey, consigned locally to fictitious consignees, were returned to the shipper Monday afternoon by agents of the local Wells Fargo Express company.

When news was received Monday at police station that there was a shipment of liquor in the local express office, officers armed with "bootleggers' guide book," went to view the newly arrived liquor. After giving it "the once over," Chief Nichols declared that it was all intended for use of local bootleggers, since every name and address on the packages was fictitious.

When it became apparent that "the law" was about to seize the entire shipment, the expressmen, it is claimed, remonstrated with the chief, and called his attention to the injunction against liquor shipment seizures.

"All right," returned Nichols, "go ahead and deliver this stuff to those fake names and addresses, and I'll show you just exactly what that federal injunction means. There is not a legal shipment in the lot."

By sundown according to Chief Nichols, the thirty-four gallons of five-year-old rye was on its way back to get some more aging.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. CAPITOL CORNERSTONE

TO BE LAID NOV. 16TH.

ing when it was suggested that the Masonic order should conduct the corner stone laying ceremonies.

P. J. Goulding, vice chairman of the commission, objected to this, Goulding, a Catholic, was speaking for the Knights of Columbus, who lodged an objection holding that either all orders should take part or none. Goulding made a motion that the State Federation of Labor lay the stone but the motion was not seconded.

The Goulding objection was finally overruled and it was decided that the ceremonies should be under direction of the Grand Lodge of the Masons and that the corner stone should bear the customary Masonic inscription.

Two tablets will word the names of the makers of the capitol, both actual artisans and the executives behind the construction.
On one side of the entrance a tablet will tell the names of the architects and contractors, sculptors and the like, on another at the opposite side of the entrance, the names of the governor, the capitol commission and the advisory board. The capitol commission closes its office 15 days from today.

TORN BY DEEP EMOTIONS BETWEEN HUMANITY AND SENSE OF DUTY

New York, Aug. 17.—M. Gustave Herve's Paris paper, La Guerre Sociale, published the following remarkable story of the sinking of the Lusitania in the form of a telegram from Milan. The writer is said to be a German socialist, and the letter from which it was taken would appear to have been communicated by an American propagandist to a journalist representing American and Italian newspapers. The story says:

"The order to sink the Lusitania arrived on May 2 at Heligoland, and aroused the indignation of all the officers. More than one was beside himself. The order was nevertheless carried out by the U-21, which left under the command of Lieutenant Hersing.

"The writer of the letter was on board his ship when Hersing returned from his expedition, and was able to take note of the coolness which all the officers manifested toward him. With out daring to lift his head, he muttered, 'It went against me to act as I did, but I could not do otherwise.' He was crying. He then told how none of his men knew the object of the voyage."

"Arrived at the spot where it was to surprise the Lusitania, the submarine had a long wait. 'As the Lusitania approached I saw people gathered on deck,' continued Hersing. 'The ship was crammed with human beings. I caused the submarine to plunge and the torpedo was discharged. I don't know whether it was this torpedo or the one discharged by the other submarine that struck the liner. I tried to avoid witnessing the ghastly scene which followed. When I came to the surface the sea was crowded with struggling wretches. I had become a man of stone, incapable of moving or giving an order.'"

BLOOD LUST STORY OF BENDER FAMILY RETOLD

where most of them have since resided.

Recently John Henderson, the brother-in-law, was visiting in Long Beach, when he saw a woman near him waiting for a car who seemed familiar to him. She drew off a glove and Mr. Henderson, who had looked at every woman's left hand for a scar since Lulu disappeared, saw the mark on her hand. When five years old Lulu had been burned and the injury left an arrow-shaped scar.

The long-lost girl is now Mrs. John Munhall of Long Beach, with a family of five children and a husband, who is a building contractor. To Mr. Henderson Mrs. Munhall explained: "When I returned to Wichita from Leavenworth I found our house deserted and, naturally enough, went to the nearest neighbors, whom we had known as the Harpers. There were several men and two or three women and a number of children.

"Another Flight Related.
"We had recognized them before as 'movers,' that is, those who, in those days, went from place to place in the old prairie schooner. The men in the Harper household were horse traders ostensibly. On applying there to learn something of my folks I was told they would be back soon and that I was to stay with them until my people returned.

"It was but a few days until they started away taking me with them into Oklahoma, down through southern Kansas. Of course I was a small child and from what they said I believed they were taking me along until they could find my parents. However, I learned before we had traveled long that they were going under assumed names and were a part of the famous and bloody Bender family, whose deeds had startled the whole country shortly before.

successfully elude apprehension and from frequent suspicions that they were being followed by detectives. This discovery gave me a great fright and I made up my mind to get away from them at the first opportunity. They did not use me well and that was an added reason for my coming away from their camp.

"When opportunity came I slipped away and walked 20 miles before I was obliged to stop for rest and shelter. Fortunately I called at a comfortable home and met some fine people in Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Westbrook, who after hearing my story, decided that I should live with them until my parents were found. Mr. and Mrs. Westbrook lived near what is now Enid, Okla. Only a year later my protectors moved to Mason City, Iowa, taking me with them and there sent me to school until I was 17, when I was married to John Munhall, a young man of that city.

"Isn't it a curious thing though that I lived in Mason City for 18 years within 100 miles of all my relatives and we never knew anything about it? We came to Long Beach two years ago and like the western country very well."

Charles E. Davis, Charles Swindall, an attorney, and O. W. Cox, a grain dealer.

In an attempt to arrest Henry Richardson, a demented man, who had terrorized relatives, Sheriff Durant and his assistant, Deputy Nixon, went to a house in Woodward shortly before noon Monday, where Richardson had fled. Richardson shot through the house, the bullet taking effect in Durant's body. Then the crazy man opened the door and exchanged shots with Nixon. Other officers arrived and Richardson was captured. He has been confined in an asylum twice and was out on parole.

During the trip to Wichita Sheriff Durant was given opiates by his physicians and did not suffer. Dr. Ralph Workman of Woodward said last night that Durant has about one chance in five for recovery.

Rules for Table Manners.

In the August American Magazine Gelett Burgess writes, "The Maxims of Japlet" presents the following rules for table manners:

"X's son, when thou sittest at meal with a damsel, have a care how thou eatest, lest thou offend her. "For this is the test of love: Whatsoever goeth into thy mouth and cometh out again, the same shall try her as with fire.

"And of these things thou shalt have a care: of the apple, and the orange, and the peach, and fruits with skins after their kind. "The cherry and the plum and the olive and the apricot, and fruits with stones after their kind.

"The grape and the raspberry and the watermelon, and fruits with seeds after their kind, of all these things shalt thou have a care.

"And whatsoever hath seeds or skins or stones, that thou spewest out of thy mouth, these shall be an abomination unto her, unless she love thee.

"Thou shalt not help her on with her wrap whilst thou has a cigar in thy teeth; it is abomination. "Neither shalt thou pick thy teeth behind thy napkin; it is abomination of abominations.

"And if thou cuttest thy potato or any vegetable with a knife, thou shalt be cast out into utter darkness. "For she smelleth with her lips, and sayeth pleasant things; yet doth her eye watch thee, and her foot tappeth the floor. It is the end of love."
